

INDIAN HANDLOOM DAY

On August 7th, Bal Bharati Public School in Neelbad, Bhopal, joyfully observed Indian Handloom Day to respect and promote India's rich cultural history of handloom weaving. The day was full with activities that emphasized the significance of handloom in Indian history and its relevance in the present world.

1 Special Assembly Presentation: Students from several grades gave a presentation on the significance of Indian Handloom Day at the start of the program. The meeting started with a prayer, and then students gave statements about the historical significance of India's handloom industry and its initiation from Swadeshi movement and how it provides jobs for millions of weavers there.

2.Documentary Screening: Students in grades IX–XII watched a documentary about the background and significance of Indian handlooms. The program offered a thorough examination of the numerous weaving techniques, the variety of handloom goods produced in the various states, and the impact of the handloom industry on the Indian economy. It also emphasized the need of promoting handloom goods internationally as well as government actions to assist the handloom sector.

The entire event was thought provoking and knowledgeable for the students.
